Huck Finn: XVII - XVIII: Dialectical Journal: (2)

Notes

I can picture this setting of the house, that Huck goes to very clearly. It was described very well, so you can understand that maybe this family is very wealthy at the time. And that it wasn't just any ordinary house then.

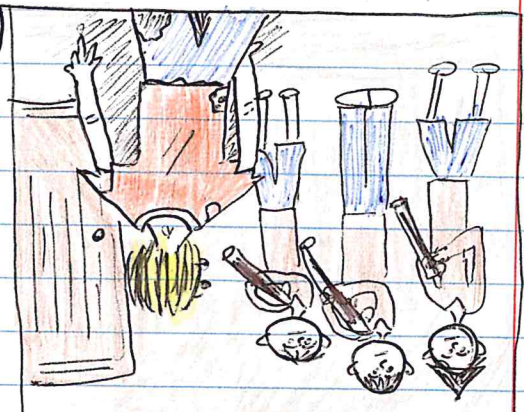

The character Buck reminds me of people at school, because people fight for no reason. Like in this case the Grangerfords fight with the Sheperdson's for not really a reason, only to fight. Also, because of the past history of their grandfathers etc.

Quotes

"It was a mighty nice house... it hadn't an iron latch on the front door, nor a wooden one, but a brass knob to turn... There wasn't no bed in the parlor. There was a big fireplace that was bricked on the bottom..." (100)

"A feud is this way: A man has a quarrel with another man, and kills him, then that other man's brother kills him: Then the cousins chip in - and feud. But it's kind of slow, and takes a long time..." what did he do to you? - why, nothing - only it's an account of the feud." (107)

Episodic Notes: (2)

Caption: "Three big men with guns pointed at me, which made me wince, I tell you; the oldest, gray and about sixty, the other two thirty or more - all of them fine and handsome." (96)

Notes: Huck is soaking wet outside these's mens house, and Huck has to be very cautious before entering their house because
